A recent article by the Macomb Daily highlighted Macomb County employees who stepped outside of their daily positions in order to provide essential services to the community during the COVID-19 pandemic.

“

While many Michiganders were able to stay home and work, during the darkest days of the pandemic as the number of coronavirus cases and deaths piled up, thousands of others like [Berry] Treadwell were out working in the community.

Berry Treadwell, who will be celebrating his 15 year work anniversary with Macomb County this month, was one of our many employees who selflessly stepped up to help and was featured in the article. He routinely volunteered to deliver Meals on Wheels after the program's own volunteers were sent home. Berry is quoted as saying that seeing his colleagues also volunteering out in the field lifted his spirits. He also stressed that his Director, Rhonda Westphal, was 'extremely supportive' and did what was necessary to assist Macomb County seniors.

In addition to the delivery of Meals on Wheels, employees across the County volunteered for various other duties to aid our seniors and residents in need during the pandemic including: packaging, loading & distributing food items at various locations; packaging & delivering senior care packages; answering & making phone calls; scheduling vaccine appointments; assisting drive-thru COVID testing sites; and assembling & distributing PPE kits to local businesses.
